FOREIGN HISTORY.

HOLLAND.

Amsterdam, September 10. N. S.

THE Prince of Orange deposed the 4 reigning burgomasters, and appointed 4 others; the next day he dismissed the whole body of the vroedschap or town-council, and appointed another, composed of 19 members of the old vroedschap, and 17 new ones. In the proceedings he acted by no other authority, as he sets forth in a declaration, than what was granted him by the High and Noble States of the province of Holland, in their resolution of August 31st last, added to the offer of voluntary resignation of the burgomasters and counsellors.

Hague, September 17. The Prince of Orange return'd hither the 13th with Count Bentinck, and the Greffier Fagel. Before he left Amsterdam, (at the repeated instances of the burghers) he deposed the 9 reigning echevins, 5 of which were however restored to their offices, and 4 new ones appointed. He also reform'd the Oud Raad, or town-council, by striking off the list 48 members, out of near 90, of which that body consisted. As to the independent council of war, the Prince has proposed in his proclamation of the 10th, that they themselves should elect, by majority of votes, 5 colonels, and fill up in the same manner the other vacant commissions: or else that a list should be made of double the number of persons required, out of which his highness should nominate 5; but the burghers chose the first of these methods, and accordingly elected their 5 colonels and all the officers of the militia. — The States General have granted to their East-India company the renewal of their charter for 20 years.

Hague, September 24. The disturbances at Haerlem ended in a resolution of the regency to desire the states of Holland to empower the Prince of Orange to accept of their resignation, and to change the magistracy of their town, as he had done at Amsterdam. When this proposal was made to the states on the 21st ult. the deputies of Dort, seeing that the burghers of several other towns would at last be obliged to come into the same measures, moved the assembly, that a resolution should be taken to change the regency, not only of Haerlem, but of all other towns that should desire it; and a resolution was accordingly taken, to give his highness the power proposed. —— Major General Rous, with 5 battalions, surprized one of the gates of Groningen, and disarmed the burghers (who had ill treated their magistrates) and thus ended all their disturbances there.

Several curious medals have been struck at Amsterdam, to eternize the memory of the happy effects resulting from the Stadtholder's sojourn in that city; amongst which, on one of them is the bust of the Prince, with this inscription round it, W. C. H. Friso, Dei gratia Pr. Arausi. & Nass. Ethnarcha, Belli Dux hæreditarius. Assertor Libertatis. On the reverse is a civil crown, with the arms of his serene highness above, and those of the city below, with these words: Civium amori & vigilantiæ Principis servato, A. U. Septembris, M.DCC.XLVIII.

A convention is signed at Aix-la-Chapelle, for immediately withdrawing 30,000 troops on each side from the armies; and the peace is nearly regulated.

Declaration published at Amsterdam, relating to the Change in the Regency of that City.

HIS Serene Highness the Prince of Orange and Nassau, hereditary Stadtholder of this Province, having been pleased to remit to the lords burgomasters and regents of this city of Amsterdam his most honourable letter, wrote here the 6th instant, by which his said serene highness informed them, that he had made all his efforts for removing in the best manner, with all the discretion possible, and by the most proper methods he could invent, the dislike and murmurings of the good burghers and inhabitants against the Lords-regents, and for re-uniting and reconciling the minds of the Lords-regents with those of the burghers and inhabitants; but his serene highness finding, to his great regret, that all those efforts had been fruitless, there remained no other step, in the present perplexed situation of affairs, and in order to prevent still much greater calamities, than to make use of the authority granted him by the resolution of the high and noble States of this province of the 31st of August of the present year, as likewise of the offer of voluntary resignation made by the Lords Burgomasters and counsellors, more amply set forth in the said resolution: in consequence of which his serene highness has judged proper, that the 4 reigning burgomasters and 35 counsellors (one of the 26 being dead) shall be discharged from the regency and their oath, without however any prejudice to their reputation, which his serene highness takes upon himself to defend; moreover declaring, that he shall be ever ready, if, against his hopes, necessity should require it, to afford the said discharged regents all the protection and security they can desire, for their persons, their families, and their effects. And, at the same time, it has pleased his serene highness, by virtue of the resolution abovementioned, to nominate for burgomasters and counsellors, &c. [Here were expressed the names of the new regents] all conformable to the list sent by his serene highness to the grand bailiff of this city, with orders to receive the oaths of the said lords burgomasters and counsellors, and install them in their respective employs: All which has been executed, in exact conformity to the most respectable orders of his serene highness.

Done at Amsterdam, 7th September, 1748.

By order of the noble and venerable Lords,

Sign'd, Jaques van de Poll.

In another Placard, the Stadtholder declares, that many of the demands of the burghers were unjust and absurd, and that, notwithstanding the pains he had taken to bring them to think coolly and impartially, they had proceeded so irregularly as to raise in him the utmost concern and indignation: yet, in order to give them the strongest proof of his sincere and paternal affection and condescension, he confirms the choice they had made of officers; but adds some regulations with respect to the meetings of the councils of war, future elections of officers, &c. and then concludes: — "As we desire to preserve invariably the paternal affection which we have for the good burghers and inhabitants of this city, we have thought proper, for this once, to pardon and forgive all the disorders that have been committed, which have come to our knowledge, and all such others as may have happen'd —— We also expect from them, that they should all and every one of them behave for the future like good and obedient burghers and inhabitants, in every thing that is required of them by the respect and submission which they owe their lawful magistrates. Lastly, we exhort and require, in the most earnest and cordial manner, all and every one of them, without distinction, to separate immediately, and not to form any public assemblies upon any pretence whatsoever: and that all deputations of the burghers whatsoever be at an end."

Naples, July 30. The King has just published an Edict relating to Persons confined for Debt, Crimes, Misdemeanors, &c. whereby it is ordered, among other Things, that all Soldiers, Debtors, &c.

after 40 Days Confinement, be maintained by those that arrested them, or else released; and the Sum for their Maintenance is settled according to the Rank or Profession of the Prisoner. By the same Edict the exhorbitant Fees, and unwarrantable Exactions of Jailors are suppressed, his Majesty conceiving it a Scandal to any Government to let such Fellows tyrannize over unfortunate Subjects, however Criminal they may be.

LONDON, September 27.

According to private Letters, by the last Mail from Holland, things are very far from being absolutely settled there. The new independant Council of War at Amsterdam, has discovered an Inclination of enquiring into the Conduct of their old Magistrates, which must occasion a good deal of Trouble if it is pursued. The People of Leyden have exhibited a Memorial to their Magistrates, consisting of eighteen Points, in Respect to each of which, they require immediate Satisfaction. The like Humour has discovered itself in Rotterdam, and it is thought that Utrecht also will take her Turn in promoting this Spirit of Reformation. In the mean Time the Commissioners that were sent to Friezland have succeeded fully in their Commission, and have settled the Affairs in that Province to the entire Satisfaction of all Parties.

Sept. 29. Sir William Calvert Knight, Alderman and Brewer, was chosen Lord-Mayor of this City for the Year ensuing.—Tho' some Insinuations were given out, of a Design to set him aside, and an Advertisement was publish'd for Sir Samuel Pennant and Alderman Blatchford, Sir William had a very great Majority of Hands in the Hall. After he was declared, and invested with the Chain, he addressed the Livery of London in an elegant Speech, in which he glanced at the secret and seditious Machinations of some Magistrates in other Cities less happy, loyal and peaceable.

September 30. Since Trade has been open'd with Spain, above 5000 Bags of Spanish Wool have been imported from Bilboa.
